Craig Calhoun is President of the Los Angeles-based Berggruen Institute, which works globally to deepen knowledge of great transformations shaping the human future. These range from artificial intelligence and gene-editing to renewed nationalism and weakened international cooperation and potentially dramatic changes in capitalism. Calhoun was previously Director of the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE), where he remains Centennial Professor, and before that President of the New York-based Social Science Research Council (SSRC). He was also University Professor of Social Sciences and Director of the Institute for Public Knowledge at NYU. His books have been translated into 20 languages and include Does Capitalism Have a Future? (2013), The Roots of Radicalism (2012), and Nations Matter (2007), which predicted rising nationalist and populist challenges to cosmopolitanism grounded in a highly unequal global economy. He has also edited recent volumes on the economic crisis and possible futures, secularism, and religion.

Sir Partha Dasgupta is Frank Ramsey Professor Emeritus of Economics at the Faculty of Economics, University of Cambridge, Fellow of the British Academy and Fellow of the Royal Society. Professor Sir Dasgupta’s pioneering work on welfare economics and environmental economics unified the concepts of intergenerational equity and sustainable development and pointed to their equivalence. He also pioneered the study of rural poverty in developing countries in the context of a deteriorating environmental resource base; and thereby brought together previously disparate fields: development economics and environmental economics.

He was named Knight Bachelor by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II in her Birthday Honours List in 2002 for “services to economics”. He has won many awards including the 2015 Blue Planet Prize for his environmental research and the 2016 Tyler Prize for Environmental Achievement for his scientific contributions to the field of environmental economics. He is the adviser for UN Inclusive Wealth Report 2018.
Andrew Feinstein was elected an ANC MP in South Africa in 1994. He resigned in 2001 in protest at the government’s refusal to allow an unfettered investigation into a £6.5bn arms deal. He is the Executive Director of Corruption Watch - an NGO that details and exposes the impact of bribery and corruption on democracy, governance and development – and an investigative writer, broadcaster and campaigner. Andrew was named amongst the 100 most influential people in the world working in armed violence reduction.

He is the author of After the Party: A Personal and Political Journey Inside the ANC; and the critically-acclaimed “The Shadow World: Inside the Global Arms Trade” which reveals the corruption and malefiance at the heart of the global arms business, both formal and illicit. A prize-winning feature documentary film of the book was released in 2016.

Andrew was educated at King’s College Cambridge, the University of California at Berkeley and the University of Cape Town. He has also spent time at the London School of Economics as a participant in that university’s Distinguished Visitors Programme. He has lectured at universities around the world including the New School, Harvard, Princeton, Cambridge, Oxford, UCT and the Free University Brussels.

Barbara M. Fraumeni is a former Professor of public policy at University of Southern Main who currently serves as research associate for the National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER), USA.

Dr. Fraumeni is a former program officer with the National Science Foundation and Chief Economist at the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis. While serving as Chief Economist at the Bureau of Economic Analysis, she was part of a team responsible for modifying the National Accounts to treat Research and Development as an investment and assess its contribution to economic growth. For this work, the U.S. Department of Commerce awarded her its highest honor (the Gold Medal) in November 2006.

She has also received CSWEP’s Carolyn Shaw Bell award for advancing the status of women in the economics profession.

She is the author for UN Inclusive Wealth Report 2018.
Urs Gasser is the Executive Director of the Berkman Klein Center for Internet & Society at Harvard University and a Professor of Practice at Harvard Law School. His research and teaching activities focus on information law, policy, and society issues and the changing role of academia in the digitally networked age. Current projects – several involving the Global Network of Internet & Society Centers, which he helped to incubate – focus on the governance of evolving and emerging technologies such as Cloud Computing, the Internet of Things, Augmented Reality, and Artificial Intelligence, with a particular interest in privacy and security issues and the broader implications of these technologies, including questions of agency and autonomy. As a longer term research interest, Professor Gasser studies the patterns of interaction between law and innovation, and innovation with the legal system in the digital age.

Jiro Kokuryo is currently serving as Vice President for International Affairs at Keio. He is responsible for leading Keio’s global outreach efforts, and is also a supervisor of Japan Science and Technology Agency (JST) funding program ‘Human-Information Technology Ecosystem’. His research interests center on how to maximize the benefits of information technologies in society and economy. As a member of the Cabinet IT Strategy Headquarters, Professor Kokuryo has played a central role in the development of Japan’s Internet policy and strategy.
Martin Rees
Emeritus Professor of Cosmology and Astrophysics at the University of Cambridge

Martin Rees is a Fellow of Trinity College and Emeritus Professor of Cosmology and Astrophysics at the University of Cambridge. He holds the honorary title of Astronomer Royal. He served for ten years as Director of Cambridge’s Institute of Astronomy and was President of the Royal Society (the UK’s academy of science) during 2005-10. He was appointed to the UK’s House of Lords in 2006. His current research relates to high energy astrophysics and cosmology. He is a foreign associate of the US National Academy of Sciences and the American Philosophical Society, and is an honorary member of the British Academy, the Russian Academy of Sciences, the Pontifical Academy, the Japan Academy and several other foreign academies. He holds numerous awards, and has served on many bodies connected with education, space research, arms control and international collaboration in science. Ever since his book ‘Our Final Century?’ was published, he has been concerned with the threats stemming from humanity’s ever-heavier ‘footprint’ on the global environment, and with the runaway consequences of ever more powerful technologies.

Nur Hassan Wirajuda
Professor at the School of Government and Public Policy
Editor-in-chief of Strategic Review — The Indonesian Journal of Leadership, Policy and World Affairs

Hassan Wirajuda served as the Foreign Minister of Indonesia from 2001 to 2009. He is also the initiator and a patron to the Institute for Peace and Democracy (IPD)—the implementing agency of the Bali Democracy Forum, and member of the Global Commission on Elections, Democracy and Security. A lawyer by training and a diplomat by choice, in 1989–1993, Dr. Wirajuda initiated the establishment of the Indonesian Commission of Human Rights. In 1993–1996, he also facilitated the peace talks between Moro Liberation Front and the Government of the Philippines that led to the signing of the Final Peace Agreement in September 1996. He was the proponent of the ASEAN Political and Security Community (of the three pillars of ASEAN Community) and the establishment of an ASEAN human rights body. He actively championed for an inclusive and balanced East Asia integration process.